To whom it may concern, It looks like the proposed changes in the WACs setting more detailed fair claims handling rules for insurance companies were well thought out. I have been handling personal injury cases for more than 51 years. I have nightmare experiences with insurance companies in the process of claims handling. Insurance companies have massive resources to fight claims and to make claims and lawsuits more expensive and time consuming. The proposed changes won't solve the problem but will make the playing field more even. Thank you, David J. Balint
