To whom it may concern,

This is another slap in the face to a physician by an insurance company /Auto carriers to affect a physicians pay. Private insurance companies haven't given Physicians a raise for over 30 years and now auto insurances are trying to decrease our pay? . We as physicians are supposed to be treating our patients on a basis of what they need to recover from auto accidents without our patients, stressing over the cost of what they may have to pay out-of-pocket. I know personally my auto insurance premiums has increased dramatically over the last couple years with no accidents! Where is that money going? The increase in premiums should also increase the benefits of an injured patient. We, as consumers, are supposed to be protected, not punished. I find that trying to lower Physicians pay is another insult to our profession. If insurance companies continue to decrease our pay with the rising cost of making a living, Insurance companies both auto and private are going to find less physicians wanting to be physicians, going in debt with school, to only get paid a fraction of amount of what many trade professions get.

Sincerely,

Dr. Gina Yaritz
